Man accused of molesting riders — again

OC Transpo. Four women allegedly attacked in incidents similar to accusations levelled last year, police say

JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

An Ottawa man who was accused of sexual assaults on OC Transpo buses last year will be back in court to face similar charges following a new police investigation.

Police said Tuesday they charged Racil Hilan, 34, with five counts of sexual assault and 10 counts of failing to comply with conditions of judicial release.

His charges came after allegations of inappropriate touching and rubbing the legs of four female passengers were reported to police between Nov. 22, 2012, and Jan. 15, 2013, police said.

Hilan is scheduled to appear in court Wednesday.

Ottawa police charged him last year on May 3 with three counts of sexual assault and three counts of mischief related to incidents that occurred on OC Transpo buses on Dec. 8 and 13, 2011, and Feb. 14, 2012.

Those charges are presently before the court.

In December 2011, police issued a public warning about a man who was inappropriately touching women on OC Transpo buses.

OC Transpo has been working with the Ottawa police's sexual assault and child abuse section on these incidents, police said in a news release.

Anyone with information is asked to contact either the sexual assault and child abuse unit, at 613-236-1222, extension 5944, or Crime Stoppers, at 613-233-8477 (TIPS).

OPS. Study on race and traffic stops delayed

The Ottawa Police Service's plan to investigate the role of race in officers' traffic stops has been pushed back by two months.

The joint decision between the OPS and the Ontario Human Rights Commission came just over a month before the two-year project was originally planned to launch. Insp. Pat Flanagan said both parties acknowledged the original timeline was "aggressive," and wanted more time to ensure the project was on the right track.

"There have been a number of challenges. There is a lot that needs to be accomplished to launch this project, and we want to make sure we do it right," said Flanagan Tuesday.

Flanagan, who is heading the project, said challenges include ensuring police undertake the proper amount of consultations as well as training for officers.

The project was part of a settlement between OPS and the OHRC. Researchers from York University will analyze data on the race of people subjected to traffic stops over a two-year period.

The settlement came after a complaint from Chad Aiken, an African-Canadian Ottawa man who was pulled over by police in 2005. He alleged he had been stopped due to his skin colour

The pilot phase for the project is now slated to begin in April, and is expected to last about four weeks. A report on the project's implementation is scheduled for a May 27 meeting of the police services board, with a full rollout no later than June 27.

Budget. Watchdogs worried by recent hospital cuts

Cuts at the Ottawa Hospital prompted three health-care watchdogs to lodge complaints over privatization, "disintegration and fragmentation of services" in the city Tuesday.

"It really appears that the Ottawa Hospital is making it up as they go along," said Michael McBane, executive director of the Canadian Health Coalition, of cuts to 290 health professionals and the off-loading of 6,000 endoscopies and 1,500 cataract surgeries to private and non-profit clinics announced in recent months.

"We haven't had any kind of description of what the plan is," he said of the hospital's struggle with a $31-million budget shortfall. "This suggests the cuts are broader and deeper than what we've known to date."

The groups said some 500,000 hours in patient care will be lost with the cuts.

"We're concerned because, according to the information that we've received, there has been no board decision to approve the service integration," said Natalie Mehra, director of the Ontario Health Coalition. On Tuesday the coalitions and the Ontario Public Service Employees Union filed a complaint with Ottawa's Local Health Integration Network, which oversees co-ordination and management of the city's health care and signs off on service changes.

McBane said the LHIN's role is to require the hospital to provide a complete plan of cuts and seek public consultation. "This has never happened," he added.

Chantale LeClerc, CEO of the Champlain LHIN in Ottawa disagreed.

"The Ottawa hospital sets their strategic plan and the role they will play in the health-care system, in the context of that mandate there will be community consultations and there has been," she said.

She said hospital budget decisions are not subject to review because an accountability agreement to bring the budget in line has already been approved by the LHIN's board.

In the meantime, she said, "it may mean reducing the number of health professionals but still being able to serve the same number of clients."

MPP regrets writing letter to divisive author

Yasir Naqvi. He wrote to writer but didn't know book endorsed forms of domestic violence

JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

Ontario Labour Minister Yasir Naqvi apologized Tuesday for writing a letter of support to an author of a controversial book that endorses violence against women.

Naqvi acknowledged he did reply to a 2009 letter from author Suhail Kapoor, who penned Islam: Balancing Life and Beyond, which sanctions a man's "lightly" striking his wife if she shows "serious moral misconduct."

But on Tuesday the Liberal MPP for Ottawa Centre said he had not read the book or a manuscript before writing back to Kapoor and was told it was about "creating and fostering understanding about Islam."

"I admire your drive to reach out to the public and promote values of tolerance, understanding and respect," Naqvi wrote in his letter.

Naqvi said he skimmed through the book Monday night and noticed his letter appeared in the "reviews" section of the book without his permission.

"I very much regret that we did not do due diligence, and that mistake will never happen again," said Naqvi. "I do apologize for that mistake because I strongly, absolutely condemn violence against women."

A published report said Kapoor was granted permission to reprint the letter in the book.

Opposition Leader Tim Hudak said he wanted Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne to demand Naqvi to rescind his endorsement of the book, but Naqvi fired back saying that his letter never endorsed it in the first place.

MPP Yasir Naqvi, seen in this file photo, came under fire from Ontario Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak after a letter Naqvi wrote to an author appeared in a book that said men may "lightly" strike their wives in cases of "serious moral misconduct." GRAHAM LANKTREE/METRO

Naqvi said violence against women is a "serious issue" as he pointed up the two private member's bills he introduced. The bills were aimed at helping victims of domestic violence get out of relationships.

This mistake, he said, will not hamper his work on the issue in the future.

"I continue to receive incredible support in the community," he said. "If anything, this furthers my resolve to work even harder to eradicate violence against women."

Black smoke signals another day of anxiety

Papal election.
Cardinals fail to vote in new pope on first try

Black smoke poured from the Sistine Chapel chimney on Tuesday, signalling that cardinals had failed on their first vote of the papal conclave to choose a new leader for the world's 1.2 billion Catholics and their troubled church.

Surrounded by Michelangelo's imposing frescoes depicting the beginning and end of the world, cardinals locked themselves into the chapel following a final appeal for unity to heal the divisions that have been exposed by Pope Benedict XVI's shocking resignation and revelations of corruption and mismanagement in the Vatican bureaucracy.

Led by prelates holding a crucifix and candles, the 115 scarlet-robed cardinals chanted the Litany of Saints, the hypnotic Gregorian chant imploring the intercession of the saints to guide their voting, before the master of liturgical ceremonies intoned "extra omnes," or "all out," and closed the heavy wooden doors.

Outside, thousands of people braved cold night rain and packed St. Peter's Square, eyes fixed on the narrow chimney poking out of the Sistine Chapel roof. They were answered some three hours after the conclave began when thick black smoke billowed out of the chimney, signalling that no pope had been elected.

For over a week, the cardinals have met to try to figure out who among them has the stuff to be pope and what his priorities should be. But they ended the debate on Monday with questions still unanswered, and many cardinals predicting a drawn-out election.

The cardinals resume voting Wednesday morning.

Taking bets

Bookmakers in betting-mad Britain are cashing in on the Roman Catholic conclave to select a new pope.

- Main game. Cardinal Angelo Scola of Milan was leading the pack for many. Ladbrokes had the Italian with odds of 2-1, while Paddy Power and William Hill had him at 9-4. Paddy Power was taking bets that the next pope will hail from Italy at 1-1.
- Waiting game. People are also placing bets on how long it will take the cardinals to elect a pope. William Hill had Tuesday as the favourite, at 5-2, with 6-4 odds on Wednesday.
- Name game. Paddy Power's second-largest pope-related market is for what name Benedict's successor will take — with Leo, Gregory and Pius among the most popular predictions.

Takes place in the Sistine Chapel, the famous Vatican hall whose walls and ceilings are adorned with Michelangelo's frescoes.
Name derived from the Latin "clausi cum clave," meaning "locked by a key." Cardinals are under lock and key and cannot communicate with the outside world while voting takes place. They sleep in the Casa Santa Marta hotel inside the Vatican grounds.
The next pope needs a two-thirds-plus-one majority of the 115 cardinals.
There are four daily ballots (except the first day, with only one). Ballots are cast on cards with the Latin phrase "Eligo in Summum Pontificem" ("I elect as the most high pontiff") and dropped into a gold chalice.
After each inconclusive round, the strung-together ballots are burned to produce black smoke over the Vatican.
If there is a winner, the ballots are burned with a chemical to produce white smoke.

Plague of dead pigs grows

The number of dead pigs found floating in a river flowing into Shanghai has reached nearly 6,000.

The Shanghai municipal government said in an online announcement that 5,916 swine carcasses had been retrieved from Huangpu River by Tuesday afternoon but added that municipal water remains safe.

The surge in the dumping of dead pigs — believed to be from pig farms in the upstream Jiaxing area in the neighbouring Zhejiang province — has followed police campaigns to curb the illicit trade of pork products harvested from diseased pigs.

Shanghai authorities said the city has taken proper measures to safely dispose of the pig carcasses and that the city's water plants are stepping up efforts to disinfect public water and testing for six common swine viruses.

The state-run China News agency said Monday that Zhejiang province had reported no swine epidemic, but that a provincial agriculture official blamed cold weather for the deaths of the pigs.

The official, who was identified only by his family name, Gu, told China News that the practice of dumping dead pigs into rivers lingers among some pig farmers in the city of Jiaxing. "We are still introducing the practice of collecting dead pigs," Gu was quoted as saying.

Shanghai authorities have been pulling out the swollen and rotting pigs, some with their internal organs visible, since Friday. Revolting images of the carcasses in news reports and online blogs have raised public ire against local officials. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Luka Magnotta inquiry. Daran Lin had to leave courtroom during one witness' testimony

A father left a courtroom in tears after hearing evidence at the preliminary inquiry of Luka Magnotta, who is accused of killing and dismembering his son.

The preliminary hearing for Magnotta has begun with testimony from police witnesses. He is charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of Jun Lin.

As a second police witness took the stand, Daran Lin was overcome with emotion and left the courtroom trembling and in tears, assisted by his translator as he left the room.

The hearing is subject to a publication ban on the evidence being presented. However, members of the public and media are allowed to witness it. A unique defence attempt to have the courtroom closed was rejected Tuesday.

The first witness to take the stand at the preliminary hearing was the lead investigator in the case. Michel Bourque is a Montreal police major-crimes investigator.

Later a crime-scene technician took the stand. During a difficult bit of testimony, Lin's father left the room.

Earlier Tuesday, the judge presiding over the hearing ruled that the public and media would be allowed to attend the legal proceedings.

Bully babies?

Babies dislike those who are different: Study

A study out of the University of B.C. suggests babies may have a mean streak.

A professor found infants as young as nine months favour those who bring harm to people who are different than themselves. Kiley Hamlin, lead author of the study published in the journal Psychological Science, says almost all of the 112 babies tested acted the same.

First, babies nine to 14 months old chose a food they preferred. They were then shown a puppet show where a puppet demonstrated the same food preference and another puppet demonstrated the opposite preference.

The babies preferred the puppets who harmed the puppet with the opposite preference. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cop convicted of plot to eat women

A New York City police officer was convicted Tuesday of charges he plotted to kidnap and cook women to dine on their "girl meat."

A trek across space and time to self-discovery

Family history. How one woman learned about all the things her grandmother never told her

SHELLEY COOK
For Metro

It all started in 1977, when Linda Kawamoto, now Linda Reid, found a story written by a woman with the same name as her grandmother.

The story, which won first place in a historical-writing contest, chronicled a young Japanese woman's journey of coming to Canada from Japan in 1907 as a "picture bride"

"When I saw this story, I thought 'Could this be my grandmother?'" said Reid in a telephone interview from her office at the Nikkei Nation Museum in Burnaby, B.C.

A curious Reid did some investigating and discovered that the story was indeed written by her grandmother, Koto Kawamoto.

"I thought, 'Wow, this is really cool. Here she is talking about all the things that she would have never told me,'" explained Reid, who was very close to her grandmother.

Eager to learn more about her family history, Reid began the task of tracing her family's roots, starting in 1902 when her young grandfather, Sansuke Kawamoto, travelled across the ocean from Meiji, Japan, to Victoria, B.C., in the hopes of finding a more prosperous life in Canada.

For five years the young man worked hard, tilling land in B.C.'s Fraser Valley.

When he earned enough to buy his own land, Reid's grandfather built a little home and began cultivating farmland on his property to make a living.

After his new picture bride — he selected her through a photo shown to him by a matchmaker — arrived in 1907, she joined in on the long hours of work. The young couple established a good life for themselves in Canada.

During the Second World War, like most Japanese people in B.C., Reid's grandparents were placed in Japanese internment camps. Everything they'd worked so hard for was lost — their 10 acres of land, their home and all of their belongings were taken and auctioned off by the B.C. Security Commission.

"It was a really painful time for Japanese people in Canadian history," Reid explained, adding many people to this day still don't like to talk about it.

"Thankfully my dad has always been very good about talking about it."

For Reid, learning about her grandparents' journey has created a whole new journey for herself. "It was my grandmother's story that really peaked my curiosity," Reid explained. "I started reading a lot of books and doing research like that. I didn't get into genealogy until the 1980s."

The research archivist has taken trips back to her grandparents' homeland, in search of learning more. She is also a longtime member of Ancestry.ca, where she has found documents and information that has helped in her research.

Reid's interest and curiosity in genealogy and family research has not only helped her find her roots, it has also been key in assisting others in their search to learn about their family's histories.

"It's like a passion for me," she said. "It's taken me into a number of wild directions."

Debunking popular belief

Records do exist for researching African-Canadian genealogy.

From 1793 until the end of the American Civil War in 1895, more than 30,000 slaves came to Canada via the Underground Railroad.

Other migrations occurred during the War of 1812, from California to Vancouver Island from 1858 to 1860, as well as between 1909 and 1911, when more than 1,500 farmers moved to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Library and Archives Canada offers various sources. Among them are The Muster Book of Free Blacks (who were among loyalist refugees when they settled in Nova Scotia) and the Book of Negroes (contains names of black loyalists, their origins, names of their white associates, ships that carried them and more).

Meanwhile, other documents include a list of black chaplains enlisted in the Canadian army (1942 to 1944), and the Canadian Pacific Railways' list of black porters (1930 to 1956). METRO

Analyst says iPhone will take a tumble — BlackBerry-style

Smartphone market. 'When handset makers fall out of favour, they fall faster/further than expected,' observer says

It's hard to imagine the iPhone's fortunes going through the same downward trajectory that BlackBerry has endured in recent years, but one analyst says that, historically, that's the way the handset market goes. GETTY IMAGES FILE

Jefferies analyst Peter Misek has likened Apple Inc.'s iPhone to the BlackBerry and Razr, devices that ascended, tumbled and are now struggling to rebound.

"Historically when handset makers fall out of favour, they fall faster/further than expected," he said in a note to investors Tuesday that evoked the comparison to Motorola, HTC and Waterloo's BlackBerry, whose new Z10 phone starts U.S. pre-orders today.

Misek sees a 25 per cent chance Apple will miss its guidance when it reports first-quarter earnings due to slowing sales in late March following Samsung Group's release of its latest Galaxy phone on Thursday.

He added that checks with suppliers show casing colour problems for the anticipated iPhone 5S will push out its launch to between July and September.

Misek, who had a $900 US price target on Apple shares in August, slashed his forecast to $420 from $500, projecting the stock will trade below its current level.

He pared his revenue forecast and his outlook for iPhone sales, predicting moderate growth and warning of further cuts to his targets if new versions of the iPhone "fail to restimulate" sales in developed markets.

The iPhone has been jockeying with the Samsung Galaxy S line for market leadership, with Apple recapturing the title in the latest quarter. But Apple shares have fallen hard since hitting their all-time high in September at $705.07 on decelerating iPhone 5 sales.

Princess to the rescue. Dad is a hacking hero

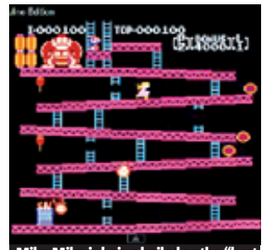
In Mike Mika's version of Donkey Kong, it's the princess who rescues Mario. In response to a plea from his three-year-old daughter, Mika hacked the game, swapping the characters and bringing a little gender parity to the classic Nintendo title.

"She's played as Princess Toadstool in Super Mario Bros. 2 and naturally just assumed she could do the same in Donkey Kong. I told her we couldn't in that particular Mario game; she seemed really bummed out by that," he wrote in a post uploaded to Reddit on Saturday.

"So what else am I supposed to do? Now I'm up at midnight hacking the ROM, replacing Mario with Pauline."

For his efforts, Mika is being hailed as the "best dad ever" by Reddit users. It's not the first time a doting father has hacked his daughter's way to hero-dom. Last year, software developer Mike Hoye released a version of The Legend of Zelda: The Wind Waker that turned the game's protagonist into a young woman.

"I'm not having my daughter growing up thinking girls don't get to be the hero and rescue their little brothers," Hoye wrote in a blog post.



Mike Mika is being hailed as the "best dad ever" for hacking Donkey Kong so the princess can rescue Mario — all to make his three-year-old daughter happy. YOUTUBE.COM

University of Toronto Prof. Sara Grimes says hacks like Hoye's and Mika's are a response to decades of underrepresentation of women in video games. "The reaction from the media and the gaming community has been so positive, I think, because they're answering a need for more equal gender representation in games," she said.

Menu-labelling law gets 'thorny'

Diners in the U.S. must wait a little longer to find calorie counts on most restaurant chain menus, in supermarkets and on vending machines. Writing a new menu-labelling law "has gotten extremely thorny," says the head of the Food and Drug Administration. The restaurant industry has signed on to the idea, but supermarkets and convenience stores have not. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The European Space Agency says it has received the first location fix from its own satellite navigation system. CAN SOMEONE THINK OF THE ALBUM?

JUST SAYIN'

Mike Benhaim
Guest columnist filling in for Paul Sullivan

Why are musicians still recording albums? Doesn't it seem that the very notion is almost a complete anachronism? They're even doling out Grammy and Juno Awards for best album despite the ever-dwindling hardware and retail outlets that purvey it. I mean, no one has a record collection anymore, just a series of files on progressively shrinking mobile devices.

But perhaps I am speaking in the abstract, and the term has a different definition to the "net" generation.

Now, I'm an avid supporter of artists and do not condone file sharing except to uncover some rare duet between Sid Vicious and Barry Manilow, so forgive me for having recently uttered the phrase "burning a CD," but I immediately regretted it. A gentleman in his late 20s mocked me with the contempt usually reserved for someone who separates from a Kardashian. With music evolving into the metaphysical, this guy would have surgically implanted a USB port into his temporal lobe were it not for its obviously inevitable obsolescence. I am also fairly certain he was watching Shahs of Sunset through wireless contact lenses as we spoke.

Prior to that, I had not considered myself old-fashioned, but it dawned on me recently, as I waited outside the photo lab for my pictures to be developed, that it might just be my romantic sentimentality.

Gather the kids around the fire, and I will regale them with magical tales about a time (insert flashback music here) when phones were answered by humans and movies played only in theatres or on TV at very specific times. You could not pause, rewind, avoid commercials or even choose the content.

These sad children were forced to witness the repeated demise of their musical mediums like eight-tracks, cassettes, records, laser discs, mini-discs and CDs, until the music simply vanished into a virtual, intangible mist. Never again would teenagers line up for the release of their favourite artist's new project, gaze at the list of titles on the back of the album jacket before peeling away the shrink wrap, revealing two panels that might contain a story, lyrics, photos or some cheeky foreshadowing of the mystery that awaited within — the music.

This is no knock on today's teen music scene. Like our oceans, there are still treasures beneath the pollution that's been dumped by the masses, but there is something to be said for anticipation and the aforementioned ceremony that surrounds a tangible addition to your collection. But why build a discernible product if photos and lyrics can be found online and videos are all on YouTube?

I guess what I am saying is that in one generation, we've gone from hoping for some of what we want to instantly getting everything we want. It's destination without the journey, or sex without foreplay — which, as my past lovers will tell you, may still be sex, but the excitement builds too fast and ends way too soon.

Eager elephants show some love

This trio of elephants show their love for one another as they get their trunks in a tangle. The three fully grown African elephants were spotted sharing a bonding moment as they huddled together.

Not fighting but hugging

GUUS QUAEDVLIEG
Website designer, 58, from Voerendaal, southeastern Netherlands

Describe the moment you met these three benevolent elephants.

My wife and I were on holiday in Addo National Park in South Africa. We were driving through the conservation park when all of a sudden we found ourselves in the middle of a big herd. Two bulls were playing and then out of the blue, a third one came and started hugging the others. I pulled out my camera and shot this photo.

Hugging? Were they not fighting?

No, not at all. Normally when elephants get together they can be quite aggressive and try to establish who has authority within the group. But when they all met it was clear they knew each other, as they were really caring and loving.

Abracadabra — you may have seen this trick before

The Incredible Burt Wonderstone. Star studded cast still manages to pull a rabbit out of their hat

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

This weekend a cast of Hollywood A-listers are going to try and do something magical. Literally.

In The Incredible Burt Wonderstone, Steve Carell and Steve Buscemi play down-and-out Las Vegas magicians, up-staged by hotshot Steve Gray (Jim Carrey). Adding more star power is Alan Arkin as a retired magician who still has a card or two up his sleeve.

With an advertising tagline like Abracatastic! you can expect lots of illusions, but Burt Wonderstone isn't the first movie magician to pull a rabbit out of his hat on screen.

In Death Defying Acts Guy Pearce plays the best-known magician of all time — Harry Houdini. Set in 1926, 13 years after his mother's death, the movie introduces him to a Scottish psychic and her daughter, played by Catherine Zeta-Jones and Saoirse Ronan, who try and con him into believing they can contact Mrs. Houdini from beyond the grave.

Houdini has been played by everyone from author Norman Mailer and Harvey Keitel to Tony Curtis and Emile Hirsch, but it's also possible to catch a glimpse of the real deal. The prestidigitator began filming his magic act as early as 1906 and went on to star in a series of films with titles like The Master Mystery and Terror Island, all of which are available on the DVD set Houdini: The Movie Star.

Taking their lead from Houdini, Penn and Teller starred in Penn & Teller Get Killed, a 1989 black comedy featuring a classic sequence of Teller catching pigeons in the park with his bare hands.

Audiences could pick one of two magic movies from the deck in 2006.

First, The Prestige saw Christian Bale and Hugh Jackman abracadabra their way through this Christopher Nolan-directed film about tragic results of a rivalry between two 19th century stage magicians. Fans of the movie will notice the main characters' initials spell ABRA — Alfred Borden Robert Angier — short for Abracadabra!

Released the same year, The Illusionist starred Edward Norton as a magician who uses his magical skills to win the love of Duchess Sophie (Jessica Biel). Norton's character is loosely based on Erik Jan Hanussen, a magician and clairvoyant who was killed by Nazis in 1933 after a long and successful sage career.

The Mad Magician isn't notable just because it starred Vincent Price as the murderous Gallico the Great. It's best remembered as the first movie to be shown in 3D on television.

What's in a name for Don Jon?

Joseph Gordon-Levitt had his directorial debut at SXSW with Don Jon.
JACK PLUNKETT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

First, he agreed to cut some of the graphic sex scenes. Now, Joseph Gordon-Levitt is trimming the title of his directorial debut.

His racy comedy, originally called Don Jon's Addiction, has been streamlined to just Don Jon.

Outside its screening at the South by Southwest film festival Monday night, Gordon-Levitt said he altered the name because some people mistakenly believed the film is about sex or porn addiction.

"I called it Don Jon's Addiction because there's this central symbol in the movie of this rut and this habit that Jon is in," said Gordon-Levitt, who also stars in the film. "It's about a guy getting out of this rut, learning to be present and have more engaged and realistic relationships."

It's the story of a modern-day Don Juan, a New Jersey lady's man who prefers porn to actual sex — even though he's having no shortage of the real thing.

Gordon-Levitt first announced the title change via Facebook, posting that the comedy is actually about "how men and women treat each other and how the media we consume can create unrealistic expectations that we put on one another."

Still, Gordon-Levitt, who previously starred in Inception, 50/50 and (500) Days of Summer, had already said he was going to remove some of the sex in Don Jon to ensure it maintained an R rating.

Is Lady Gaga ready to settle down with Chicago Fire star Taylor Kinney?

"From all I've heard, I don't think I'm dropping a secret by saying they are ready to get hitched this year," DJ Lady Starlight, a close friend of Gaga's, tells the Sun, adding that both Gaga and Kinney have free time in their schedules in July. "She told me he's the one and you know that instantly when you see them together," the DJ says. But a rep for the singer insists to E! News that the reports of impending wedding bells are definitely not true.

Selena Gomez

From a wizard to a woman

As her new movie Spring Breakers suggests, former Witches of Waverly Place star Selena Gomez is eager to cut ties with her Disney past.

"Disney is a machine, and I'm grateful for it, but I feel like being part of that environment made me crave the reaction from other projects even more," Gomez tells the New York Times. "Creatively this is where I wanted to go."

The racy, violent film features Gomez and former High School Musical star Vanessa Hudgens as coeds who rob a diner to fund a wild week in Florida.

Justin Bieber

Bieber enjoys momentary break from the spotlight in Dutch coffee shop

Justin Bieber took a much-needed breather in Amsterdam between his tumultuous stay in London and his tour stop in Portugal, and apparently hitting up the Dutch city made the pop star a bit peckish.

Bieber and his security detail were spotted patronizing a coffee shop and a chip shop called Chipsy King.

"Justin seemed to be amused or comforted by the fact that the employee didn't know him at first and wasn't jumping all over him and treated him like a regular customer," a rep for the chip shop tells E! News.

"The employee thought he had beautiful eyes and he knew he recognized him from somewhere, but he didn't know until a Dutch film crew told him that was Justin Bieber."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Lil Jon might DJ your next Zumba class

THE WORD
Meredith Engel
scene@metronews.ca

When Lil Jon told us he was gonna move "till the sweat drips down" to a specific place near his own Lil Jon, as it were, we had no idea he was talking about getting low in a Zumba class.

But apparently the rapper is a big fan of the fitness craze (or just really, really short on cash) and has signed on to DJ Zumba classes across the country as part of a new Zumba Nightclub Series.

Lil Jon will spin on the turntables while celebrity instructor Gina Grant leads a workout. Oh, and don't expect to hear Lil Jon's new single, Work, on the radio anytime soon — it was created especially for Zumba and will be the official theme song for the nightclub series tour, complete with dance moves.

As Metro's resident fitness test dummy, I admit that this class does sound tantalizing.

But I will only partake under the following conditions: 1. I get to rehydrate with crunk juice instead of water, and 2. All participants get to shout "OH-KAY!" and "YAY-UH" whenever they please.

Interview. Metro sent some questions into orbit with astronaut Chris Hadfield at the International Space Station

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

Are civilians ready for space? Should a trip there be on everyone's bucket list?
With some of the technology that's being developed, you can launch off the ground, go up high enough so you just get to the legal definition of space, about a 100 kilometres up or so. And then come back down again. Pretty amazing voyage. Are civilians ready for space? Well I'm a civilian. Most of the people that fly in space are civilians. I think the real question is, are untrained passengers ready for spaceflight, and should it be on everyone's bucket list? Well of course! It's just such a cool thing. Number one to be weightless, to be able to just tumble, even only for a few minutes to be able to do that is a completely rare experience. But to be able to see the world from this altitude, to be able to look down and see the curvature of the earth, and the thin atmosphere and the beauty of it and the colours of it.

If you were writing a TripAdvisor review of the International Space Station what would it say?
So if I was writing a TripAdvisor for the Space Station, what would I say? Unique destination. Travel there is difficult but worth the ride. Accommodation and food are spartan, functional but healthy and overall acceptable. Recreational activities are limited. But the view out the window is out of this world.

Which places have intrigued you enough to want to visit once you return to Earth — and why?
Deserts are some of the most beautiful things you see because the colours are so widespread and the sand and the rock forms into such — they're natural shapes, but they look so artistic and beautiful. And up here, we're removed so we just see the artistry but I'd like to go and actually feel what that's like. To compare the super high altitude, very calm and overpoweringly visual aspect of it with the visceral, five sense reality of what those places are like, I'd like to go and experience that so I can compare the two and try to match them together in my head.

Spend some summer time at Windermere

Lake loving. Nestled in the Rockies is a shallow, warm lake that's perfect for water sports

Winter, spring, summer or fall there's one main attraction that keeps visitors coming back to the B.C. resort town of Invermere.

It's Lake Windermere.

Nestled in the scenic Columbia Valley with the Rocky Mountains to the east and the Purcell Mountains to the west, Lake Windermere is actually a very large widening in the Columbia River.

It's one of the largest and warmest lakes in the region and has an average depth of only four-and-a-half metres.

"The lake is pretty much the focus," said Heidi Korven, a travel media specialist with Tourism B.C.

"In winter they have the 'White Way' on the lake. It's a 16-kilometre stretch where they clear it for ice skating as well as (put) tracks on it for cross-country skiing on the lake, so that's kind of cool. They also have pond hockey and a curling bonspiel," she said.

"It's a very cool thing you can do — very Canadiana because you're right in the valley there with the Rockies on one side and the Purcells on the other on this beautiful lake in the winter.

"In the summer the main draw is again the lake because they've got great beaches and it's a really good lake for jet skiing."

The town of 4,000 is about a three-hour drive (277 kilometres) west of Calgary and is a half hour away from ski resorts at Panorama Mountain Village to the west and the Fairmont Hot Springs Resort ski area to the south.

There are the Radium and Fairmont hot springs year round and in the summer the Columbia Valley Golf Trail features nine golf courses within minutes of Invermere — including the Radium Resort Course, Eagle Ranch, Copper Point and Greywolf.

"The town is really hopping in the summer," said Korven.

Just 40 minutes south of Cancun, the city of Playa del Carmen (population 150,000) sits near the middle of the Mayan Riviera, opposite the island of Cozumel. Calm, cool and collected, the vibe is assuredly unhurried

A visit to Tulum is a must while visiting Playa del Carmen. ALL PHOTOS: PAUL MCCROSSIN

The main drag

Avenida Quinta (Fifth Avenue) is the main pedestrian strip, where you can get your shop on any time of the day or night. Hundreds of restaurants, bars and stores line this little main drag, catering to the daily influx of tourists popping off cruiseships for a poke around town. They dock near the south end of Fifth Avenue, making it more touristy. Stick to the north end for some peace and quiet, plus a better quality of shopping and dining.

Sweet success

Business in this tiny town in general is booming — but not in a way that makes the bustle too much to bear. Though city planners are trying to maintain Playa's community charm, you should pay a visit before the Hard Rock Café and Ruth's Chris move in.

Day tripping

While sitting in a chair staring at the surf has its benefits, block off a day to rent a car for a drive to Tulum, and a visit to both the 13th-century ruins and the surrounding beaches. The only Mayan city built on a coastline, the Tulum pre-hispanic ruins are ringed by a limestone wall seven metres thick, with the prominent castle sitting at the top of the limestone bluffs. This is a very popular tourist site, so try to get there as close to opening time as possible (8 a.m.) to avoid the throngs and take advantage of the best sunlight of the day for your photos.

Scuba & snorkel

It was scuba diving that helped put Playa del Carmen on the map. It was just a sleepy little fishing town until a ferry service began from there to the island of Cozumel, one of the best places to dive in the world. The Great Mesoamerican Reef, which stretches 725 kilometres from Cancun south to the Bay Islands of Honduras, is the world's second largest reef. It marks the spot for surveying 150 varieties of reef fish and 100 species of coral. Freshwater sinkholes, called cenotes, make for a fun afternoon of crystal-clear diving or snorkelling in and around caves where the visibility can reach up to 125 metres year-round.

Sian Ka'an biosphere reserve

At 1.3 million acres, this UNESCO World Heritage Site is the largest protected area in the Mexican Caribbean and includes the 23 archeological sites of the Maya civilization. Promoting ecosystem conservation and the sustainability of natural resources, the Centro Ecológico champions low-impact tourist activities, while educating visitors about the region at the same time.

What are the perks of a pre-apprenticeship?

If you're considering a career in the skilled trades but aren't quite ready to dive headfirst into an apprenticeship, consider trying a pre-apprenticeship program first.

These programs are a great way to expose yourself to the trade, gain work experience and earn some basic certifications before committing to being a full-on apprentice.

Take a hands-on approach to figuring out your future. ISTOCK

Benefits of a pre-apprenticeship

- Develop your skills and knowledge of the trade
- Prepare yourself for employment
- Explore a potential trade you aren't sure about but have an interest in
- Upgrade your academics — some programs focus on a specific knowledge area and offer further courses to build up your knowledge before entering a full-time placement

How to get involved

First and foremost, contact your local apprenticeship office to find out which pre-apprenticeship programs are offered in your area. Information will differ depending on what province you're situated in.

The following are examples of different types of programs offered in Ontario:

Employment Ontario

Ontario's Pre-Apprenticeship Training Program offers programs up to 52 weeks in duration which consist of both in-class training sessions and a work placement.

Pre-Apprenticeship Training Institute (Ontario)

This institution emerged in 2006 upon recognition of the need for higher education in the technical field. The Pre-Apprenticeship Training Institute offers training in various trades including plumbing, refrigeration and air conditioning mechanics, carpentry and network cabling.

Next step

What comes after a pre-apprenticeship?

- Completing a pre-apprenticeship program puts you at a big advantage in terms of landing a long-term apprenticeship with an employer.
- Knowing you have the hands-on experience, safety training and necessary skill-sets already in place will make your resumé that much stronger (and will make you that much more employable).

Earn while you learn as an apprentice

Won't you be my mentor? How to pin down a program that suits your success plan

CHRISTINA PELLEGRINI
TalentEgg.ca

Apprenticeships provide workers with the knowledge and technical skill they need to know work in the trades.

They also allow individuals an opportunity to find a career they love, get certified and get paid in the process.

If want to be an apprentice in Canada, it's your responsibility to find an employer who's willing to hire, supervise and mentor you.

Sounds easy, right? According to a 2010 Canadian Apprenticeship Forum report, finding a supportive employer who's willing to sponsor you is often the hardest part of the process.

Darrin Carron, dean and principal at Durham College's School of Skilled Trades, Apprenticeship and Renewable Technology located east of Toronto in Oshawa and Whitby, offers tips on how to find an employer-sponsor.

Get training in high school

Youth apprenticeships are a great way for high school students to explore the trades, connect with an employer and earn hours toward your apprenticeship while working toward a secondary school diploma.

These programs have different names and eligibility requirements depending on where you live because they're administered by the provinces/territories. To be eligible in Ontario, for example, you must at least 16 years old and a full-time Grade 11 high school student.

Contact your regional apprenticeship office if you're interested in enrolling in an apprenticeship program in Canada. ISTOCK

Work as a general labourer

Getting a job as a labourer shows an employer that you're willing to learn and work. It can help you meet people in the industry and increase the size of your network.

You can contact them again when it's time to find an employer-sponsor for an apprenticeship.

Cold call local businesses

Flip through your old dusty phone book and call local businesses in your area to search for apprenticeship opportunities. A career counsellor can help you structure and practise your script. Having a plan to wow the employer can help you get an interview.

Build your network

Who you know matters and knowing someone in the trade is the best way to find a sponsor. Ask your parents, family, teachers, friends and acquaintances if they know anyone in your trade.

Search for company owners on LinkedIn. This will help you build relationships and learn about unadvertised opportunities.

Keep your eyes on the prize as you set out to succeed as an electrician. ISTOCK

Shining a light on how to ace the electrician exam

Socket to me.

Prepping for this test will take patience and positive thinking

CHRISTINA PELLEGRINI
TalentEgg.ca

Construction and maintenance electrician is one of 55 trades in Canada that requires tradespeople to become a licensed journeyperson by your province or territory.

After completing an apprenticeship, you are required to pass the inter-provincial exam called the Certificate of Qualification.

Earning at least 70 per cent on the C of Q exam (a passing grade) is one of the biggest challenges for many aspiring electricians.

Leo Bitonte, a journeyman electrician who challenged and passed the C of Q last year, and Sam Mallak from Electricalexam.ca, a company that offers pre-exam tutoring in Canada, provide insight into common challenges and solutions that will help you study effectively, pass the C of Q and earn your license.

How you're approaching the exam

You're taking shortcuts
Don't rely on your friends to tell you about the questions on their exam (they're constantly changing) and don't buy outdated books because you think you're saving money. Learn the content you're required to know because employers are looking to hire licensed electricians who are knowledgeable, Mallak says.

"There's too much to know"
It's true, there's a lot of content to study and learn. So don't cram, Bitonte says. Enroll in a pre-exam course that teaches you the ins and outs of the C of Q.

How you're practising:

The wording of these questions is confusing
The more you practise writing tests, the more familiar you'll become with how questions are written and structured.

Some questions cover things I've never done before
Be conscious of the exam throughout trade school and take every lesson seriously — even if you think it's not relevant for your apprenticeship.

There's not enough time
You get three hours to complete the exam. When you're completing practice exams, imitate the testing environment and time yourself.

When you're writing the exam Bitonte suggests answering all the questions you know first and skipping the ones you don't. Remember, all you need to pass is 70 per cent so if you don't know the answer, guess. But monitor how much time you spend on each question.

Don't overdo it

Aiming for perfection?

- While it's nice to score as close to 100 per cent as possible, all you need is 70 per cent to pass. Whether you score a 71 or 99, it doesn't matter and it's not necessarily reflective of how you will perform as an electrician
- But scoring 69 per cent does — anything below a 70 is a failing score.

Big business. Your questions about heavy duty equipment technicians answered

CHRISTINA PELLEGRINI
TalentEgg.ca

Heavy duty equipment technicians diagnose, repair and maintain a variety of heavy duty vehicles, including bulldozers, cranes, graders, tractors, paving equipment, off-road haulers and earth movers.

They interpret work orders, keep equipment cleaned, test repaired equipment to ensure safety regulations are met and write service reports.

Technicians often use electronic and computerized testing devices to identify problems and problem solving skills to recommend solutions.

What are common job titles?

Heavy duty equipment technicians are also commonly known as:

- Heavy duty equipment mechanics
- Construction equipment mechanics
- Farm equipment mechanics
- Heavy equipment mechanic
- Heavy mobile logging equipment mechanic
- Heavy mobile mining equipment mechanic
- Tractor mechanic

What are the working conditions like?

Some heavy duty equipment technicians work in labs or service centres, while others work on construction or industrial sites, such as oil and gas operations or at mines.

Mobility, working hours and environmental conditions will vary depending on your position, employer and which part of the country you're working in. However, maintaining a safe workplace will be a top priority no matter where you work or which company you work for.

Are heavy duty equipment technicians licensed?

According to Human Resources and Skills Development Canada, trade certification for heavy duty equipment technicians is mandatory in Quebec and Alberta, and available but voluntary in all other provinces and territories.

Red Seal endorsement is available nationwide for individuals upon successful completion of the inter-provincial Certificate of Qualification exam. You can challenge the C of Q exam after completing a three- to six-year apprenticeship program (duration depends on your previous experience and where you live) and require a minimum score of 70 per cent on your exam to pass.

In terms of education requirements, it's recommended that you graduate from high school and gain credits toward your apprenticeship by enrolling in a youth apprenticeship program. But many employers, even the ones who operate in non-compulsory provinces, hire technicians that are licensed journeypersons. In some cases, licensed automotive service technicians and truck and transport mechanics are preferred over heavy duty technicians.

Bake like the Irish with Soda Bread

This classic Irish quick bread — no rising time needed — lends itself to numerous creative variations. Traditional recipes often call for nothing but flour, salt, baking soda and buttermilk or yogurt.

Currants are a common addition, but that's just the start. Any number of seeds, nuts, chopped dried fruit and even chocolate can be added.

For this take on Soda Bread, start with a rich take on the classic recipe, studding it with currants and caraway seeds. Then swap those out to make an oatmeal-rye version with walnuts and fresh thyme and chives. And for a sweet finish, create a chocolate variation, adding a generous half a cup of cocoa powder, dried cherries and dark chocolate.

Soda Bread

1. Heat the oven to 400 F. Coat a loaf pan or a 9-by-9-inch baking pan with cooking spray.

2. In a large bowl, whisk together the flour, sugar, salt, baking soda and caraway seeds. While stirring, mix in the melted butter until small lumps form and the butter has been evenly distributed. Gently stir in the currants.

3. In a small bowl, whisk together the egg and buttermilk. All at once, pour the egg-buttermilk mixture into the flour mixture. Stir gently but thoroughly, just until the flour mixture is moistened. Do not over-mix the dough or the bread will be tough.

4. Scoop the dough into the prepared pan and bake for 30 to 40 minutes, or until a wooden skewer or cake tester inserted at the centre comes out clean. Allow to cool in the pan for 5 to 10 minutes before turning out onto a wire rack. Serve warm with butter or jam.

Oatmeal-Rye Soda Bread with Herbs and Walnuts

1. Follow the recipe above, but instead of white pastry flour substitute 2 1/2 cups whole-wheat pastry flour, 1 cup oatmeal and 1 cup rye flour. Omit the caraway seeds. In place of the currants, stir in 3 tablespoons chopped fresh thyme, 3 tablespoons chopped fresh chives and 1 cup chopped toasted walnuts. Bake as directed.

Double Chocolate Cherry Soda Bread

1. Follow the main recipe, but sift 1/2 cup cocoa powder into the dry ingredients in the first step. Also, increase the sugar to 2/3 cup and omit the caraway seeds. In place of the currants, stir in 1 cup chopped dried cherries and 1 cup chopped dark chocolate. Bake as directed. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 4 cups white pastry flour
- 3 tbsp sugar
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 tsp baking soda
- 1 tsp caraway seeds
- 6 tbsp (3/4 stick) unsalted butter, melted
- 3/4 cup dried currants, plumped in hot water
- 1 egg
- 1 2/3 cups buttermilk or plain regular yogurt (not Greek style)

Soda Bread

Each recipe serves about 12. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Drink of the Week

Irish Coffee

- Boiling water
- Hot coffee
- 2 sugar cubes
- 1 1/2 oz Irish whiskey
- 1/4 cup whipping cream, lightly beaten (but still pourable)

Fill large coffee cup with boiling water to preheat. Let stand 1 minute then empty glass. Fill glass three-quarters full with hot coffee. Add sugar, stir until dissolved. Stir in whiskey. Top coffee-whiskey blend with the lightly whipped cream. To do this, hold overturned spoon over coffee, then slowly pour the cream over it. Goal is for cream to float on top of coffee. Do not mix.

Beyond green beer

There really are so many other ways to celebrate St. Patty's Day than with green beer, not to mention far more appealing methods of sipping a green beverage. To prove the point, here are three alternatives to green beer.

Ingredients

Herbal Remedy
- Juice of each 1 lemon, 1 orange, 1 lime
- 1 tbsp finely minced ginger
- 2 tsp honey
- 2 sprigs fresh mint, leaves only
- 2 large basil leaves
- 1 1/2 ounces Irish whiskey

Emerald Mary
- 3 tomatillos, husked and roughly chopped
- Zest and juice of 2 limes
- 2 sprigs cilantro, plus more to garnish
- 1/2 very ripe avocado
- 1 tsp each Worcestershire sauce and horseradish
- 2 oz vodka
- 1/4 cup water
- Salt and black pepper
- Hot sauce, to taste
- 1 stalk celery, to serve

Irish Grasshopper
- 1 oz each Bailey's Irish Cream liqueur, green creme de men the liqueur, clear creme de cacao liqueur
- 1/2 cup whole milk
- Finely chopped Andes chocolate mint candies

Herbal Remedy

This bracing cocktail is also delicious cut with seltzer and served as a spritzer. Or add ice to the blender and turn it into a frozen Irish margarita.

1. In a blender, combine all ingredients and blend until smooth. Pour into a cocktail glass with a couple of ice cubes.

Emerald Mary

1. In blender, combine tomatillos, lime zest and juice, cilantro, avocado, Worcestershire sauce, horseradish, vodka and water. Blend until smooth. Pour into a tall glass with ice, then garnish with celery and cilantro.

Irish Grasshopper

1. In a cocktail shaker filled with ice, shake together the Bailey's, creme de menthe, creme de cacao and milk. Moisten the rim of a double old fashioned glass with the cocktail mixture, then dip the rim in the chopped candies to coat the rim. Strain the drink into the glass. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AHL player charged with trespassing

A Canadian hockey player ended up in a San Antonio jail earlier this week after allegedly breaking into a home while "heavily intoxicated" and making himself comfortable.

Hamilton's Scott Timmins, a forward with the AHL's San Antonio Rampage, was arrested Monday morning and charged with criminal trespassing.

According to San Antonio police, a 43-year-old woman awoke in her home to find Timmins sitting on her couch. The police report said Timmins, 23, was heavily intoxicated, smelled of alcohol and was unable to maintain his balance.

Police say the woman asked, "Who are you?" and Timmins allegedly replied "Who are you?"

Hot Daug. Sens support sophomore's creativity after failed 360-toe-drag attempt in shootout

Kaspars Daugavins rarely makes headlines for the Ottawa Senators, but his shootout attempt Monday night against the Boston Bruins had everyone talking.

The Senators forward surprised a sold-out Scotiabank Place crowd as he carried the puck straight toward Boston goalie Tuukka Rask by pinning it with the toe of his stick, then trying a 360 spin move before failing to jam the puck between the post and Rask's skate.

The Bruins went on to win 3-2.

At Tuesday's practice, and on social media, Daugavins' move was the topic of the day.

"I thought it was awesome," said Ottawa defenceman Marc Methot. "It's exciting for the fans, and as a player and a fan of the game, I enjoyed it. It's as good a shot attempt that misses."

Daugavins admitted he was a bit worried that coach Paul MacLean might be a little angry with him for trying something so different, but MacLean had no problem with the play.

"I had no issue with it at all," MacLean said. "I thought it was pretty creative. The crowd seemed like they enjoyed it. It didn't go in, but imagine if it had gone in the net. If it caused this much of a stir by not scoring, imagine if it had gone in the net."

Daugavins has actually pulled the move off in the past with AHL Binghamton, and he figured he would give it another try.

"For me I tried that move like eight times and it worked every time so I thought it might work in a game again," Daugavins said. "Obviously there's going to be somebody who doesn't like it or says I shouldn't have done it."

Senators goalie Ben Bishop admitted a number of players had been encouraging Daugavins to try the move and were glad to see him finally give it a shot.

"It takes a lot of courage to go out there and do it," Bishop said. "It's unfortunate that he didn't score, but it's not like it was just going out there and having fun. He's practised that quite a bit and he's good at it and he's effective."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quoted

"I'm not sure if we'll hold him back, but we might want to check with him and say what can I look forward to."

Senators head coach Paul MacLean who said he would have no problem putting Daugavins in for a shootout again.

Grapes weighs in

Even popular hockey personality Don Cherry joined the conversation, and was surprisingly supportive.

- "People are putting down Kaspars Daugavins for putting the blade of his stick upside down on the puck in the shootout last night," Cherry tweeted. "I don't blame the kid at all. Lets face it the shootout is a gimmick anyway. Fans loved it and besides it worked for him in the AHL."

UFC. Domino effect starting with injured Canadian leaves slot open for welterweight

Nate 'The Great' Marquardt needed crutches after his last foray into the cage.

But the former Strikeforce welterweight champion didn't hesitate when he was asked to fight at UFC 158 on short notice.

His bout Saturday night against Jake 'The Juggernaut' Ellenberger at Montreal's Bell Centre marks his return to the UFC after two fights in Strikeforce.

"I'm super excited," said Marquardt (35-11-2), who suffered some nasty leg damage in a loss to Tarec Saffiedine in January. "I feel like this fight is a good chance to kind of erase my last fight. It's a great fight for me to come back on.

"He's a very tough guy and he's a great fighter. He's world-class. And those are the guys I do my best against."

It's also a welcome return to Montreal for Marquardt, a longtime training partner of UFC champion Georges St-Pierre — who faces Nick Diaz in the main event Saturday.

An injury to Montreal's Rory 'Ares' MacDonald caused a domino effect in the UFC 158 welterweight fights.

Jonny Hendricks stepped in for MacDonald to meet Carlos 'The Natural Born Killer' Condit. That left Ellenberger (28-6), who had been due to meet Hendricks, without an opponent.

Messi scores twice as Barcelona takes down AC Milan

Lionel Messi scored a brilliant brace to help Barcelona beat AC Milan 4-0 and complete a historic comeback that took his side into the quarter-finals of the Champions League on Tuesday.

Barcelona won 4-2 on aggregate after a spectacular second leg in the last 16, entering the record books as the first team to turn around a 2-0 first-leg away loss in the competition.

Barcelona imposed its attack from the start and Messi finished off a team move just five minutes in to give the hosts a huge boost of confidence.

Messi struck with another left-footed strike in the 40th to level the contest over two legs. Barcelona's relentless pressure paid off in the 55th when David Villa netted the decisive goal before Jordi Alba added a fourth in stoppage time.

Barcelona joins Galatasaray in the last eight after the Turkish side beat Schalke 3-2 on the night and 4-3 on aggregate.

2014 Winter Games. IOC inspectors descend on Sochi for latest inspection

With the games less than a year away, IOC inspectors are paying another visit to Sochi to check on preparations for the 2014 Winter Olympics.

The IOC co-ordination commission, headed by Jean-Claude Killy, began two days of meetings and site visits Tuesday in the Black Sea resort.

It is the panel's ninth and penultimate trip to Sochi before the opening of the games on Feb. 7, 2014. Russia is spending more than $50 billion on venues and infrastructure projects to prepare for its first Winter Games.

Also taking part in this week's meetings are leaders of the seven winter sports federations on the Olympic program.

The IOC says talks will cover games operations, the torch relay, technology and the "client experience" for athletes, national Olympic committees, spectators and media.

What a difference a few decades make

ALL PHOTOS WHEELBASE

2013 Toyota RAV4

- Type. Four-door, front/all-wheel-drive compact wagon
- Engine (hp): 2.5-litre DOHC I4 (176)
- Transmissions. Six-speed automatic
- Base price (incl. destination) $25,400

Design

Physically, it now displays all sorts of swoops and curves that replace a boxier design. In back, the side hinged cargo door with attached spare tire has been replaced by a more practical liftgate. The full-size spare (a rarity in this class) is now discretely located beneath the cargo floor. There's also a handy spot to hide small valuables next to the spare.

The addition of a liftgate makes the 2013 model a more practical one than the previous year's model.

Engine

Returning for 2013 is the one and only 2.5-litre four-cylinder that delivers 176 horsepower and 172 pound-feet of torque, which is actually enough for a vehicle that weighs in at about 1,550 kilograms. Although the engine returns basically unchanged, there's a new six-speed automatic transmission that replaces the previous four-speed unit.

Fuel economy

The new fifth and sixth overdrive gearing — plus a more efficient torque converter — is largely responsible for the drop in fuel consumption to 8.7 l/100 km in the city and 6.4 on the highway (for front-wheel-drive models), which is down from 9.5/6.9. All-wheel-drive versions achieve 9.1/6.8, which is an improvement from 9.7/7.2.

Review. Starting a whole new class of vehicles is one thing. Being expected to continually redefine that class is something else altogether. No pressure

MALCOLM GUNN

What a difference a couple of decades can make.

The original Toyota RAV4 that helped usher in the compact-utility segment back in 1996 was a major design and marketing breakthrough. Vehicles such as the Honda CR-V, Ford Escape and others eventually followed, with all offering an economical and affordable way to deal with just about any type of inclemency that Ma Nature might have tossed our way.

The latest RAV4 is no less capable, but over the years has evolved into an elegant, sophisticated and highly detailed wagon.

Most of the cabin has been completely restyled and is awash with "soft-touch" materials and silver trim bits, which is pretty standard for this class now.

If you're planning to add the third-row seat option to your RAV4, be advised that Toyota has discontinued that feature due to an apparent lack of interest.

The AWD option is updated with Auto, Lock and Sport modes to suit specific traction and driving situations. Lock keeps half the power going to the back wheels as long as you're driving slower than 40 km/h. Sport mode allows wider transfer of torque between the front and rear wheels (as much as half to the rear) than the Auto mode.

The base RAV4 LE comes with 17-inch steel wheels, which probably helps keep the starting price close to the $25,000 mark, including air conditioning, reclining second-row seat plus most of the basic power features.

The mostly business-like asymmetrical dashboard and control panel runs counter to the currently in vogue shapes that appear to intrude into the passenger area. There are eight standard airbags as well as a 15.5-centimetre display that doubles as a monitor for the backup camera.

The XLE adds a moonroof, dual-zone climate control, premium bucket seats and fancier 17-inch alloy wheels, while the Limited loads up with power-adjustable and heated front seats, power liftgate and 18-inch wheels. The XLE and AWD Limited are also the portals to a variety of premium-level options, including voice-activated navigation and Bluetooth wireless networking.

Whether in standard trim or all dressed up, the latest RAV4 is a handsome wagon that accentuates economy and efficiency, which was exactly the stated mission all those years ago. This time around, though, the RAV4 leaves behind its entry-level ways to become a more elegant and refined traveller.

The 2009 to 2013 generation of Subaru's Forester enjoyed a healthy sales life and a loyal following of owners. A compact crossover SUV with an eye for safety, confidence and sensibility, all models got five seats, all wheel drive (AWD) and more than 1,900 litres of cargo space. Available feature content included navigation, Bluetooth, heated leather seats, xenon lights and more.

The 2009 to 2013 generation of Subaru's Forester sold well and had a loyal following of purchasers.
SUBMITTED

Common Issues

Check for proper operation of the air conditioning system. Some owners have reported issues with the AC, possibly accompanied by excessive noise when the system is turned on.

Be sure to determine where the timing belt lies within its service life on the Forester you're considering. If a replacement is due, it could cost up to $1,000. If you neglect said replacement, it could cost you an engine.

Feel for any tugging or pulling through the steering wheel while on a flat road. If any is present, the model you're considering may need an alignment.

Signs of turbocharger trouble on a Forester XT may include smoke from the exhaust at startup or after a drive. Be sure the turbocharged Forester you're considering hasn't been pre-warmed ahead of your test drive to conceal a smoke issue. Note that models treated to regular oil changes should have no turbocharger issues. Opt for a non-turbo model if you're concerned. Finally, front seats, hatchback prop struts and paint-on-the-rocker panels just behind the front wheels should be scrutinized for signs of wear.

Engine

Forester came with one of two engines. Standard was a proven 2.5 litre BOXER four-cylinder engine making 170 horsepower. Available in the 2.5XT model was a turbocharged version, which made 225 horsepower. Manual or automatic transmissions were available.

What owners like

Owners tended to comment positively on fuel mileage, performance from the standard engine with manual gearbox, the slippery-weather assurance of the AWD system and laid-back, easy-to-drive character.

What owners dislike

Common complaints centre around bland looks, poor performance from models with the automatic transmission and a clumsy cupholder design.

Verdict

Major issues are largely non-existent here and Forester is enjoying a reputation for reliable long-term performance. Shop confidently if you find a good deal on a nicely-maintained Forester that fits your needs and budget.

The rush of speed isn't all it's revved up to be

The speedometer on the Toyota Yaris says the tiny car can go 140 miles per hour.

In reality, the bulbous subcompact's 106-horsepower engine and automatic transmission can't push it any faster than 109.

So why do the Yaris — and most other cars sold in the U.S. — have speedometers that show top speeds they can't possibly reach? The answer has deep roots in an American culture that loves the rush of driving fast. The automakers' marketing departments are happy to give people the illusion that their family car can travel at speeds rivalling a NASCAR racer. And companies often use one speedometer type in various models across the world, saving them money. But critics say the ever-higher numbers are misleading. Some warn they create a safety concern, daring drivers to push past freeway speed limits that are 65 to 75 m.p.h. in most states.

Last year, speedometer top speeds for new versions of the mainstream Ford Fusion and Chevrolet Malibu were increased from 120 or 140 m.p.h. to 160, which approaches speeds on some NASCAR tracks.

The speedometer on the Honda Accord already topped out at 160. All are midsize family haulers, the most popular segment of the U.S. auto market, and like most new cars, have top speeds that seldom exceed 120 m.p.h. The Yaris got its 140 m.p.h. speedometer in a redesign for the 2012 model year, giving it the same top reading as the original 1953 Chevrolet Corvette sports car.

Even the new Nissan Sentra compact has a 160 m.p.h. speedometer. There are several explanations for the speedometers. When people are comparison shopping, cars with higher speedometer readings appear to be sportier and buyers favour them even though they have no intention of driving over 100."

WHEELBASE MEDIA

A bigger wheel

Remember when you or your children were power sliding around the driveway on one of Mattel's Big Wheels trikes? High Roller USA will sell you an adult-sized version that's built to accommodate, shall we say, the more developed rider. The extra-wide, 26-inch-tall (66-centimetre) pneumatic front tire is mounted to an alloy wheel and is complemented by two 14-inch-tall (35-centimetre) molded plastic rear wheels to create that spinout effect when you crank the handle bars. highrollerusa.com.

Paper Zonda

If Italian supercars like the Pagani Zonda are your weakness, but you're a few bucks short of the US $500,000 needed to acquire the real thing, Visual Spicer has just the perfect build-it-yourself project to keep you occupied. All you need is a color paper printer plus the latest version of Adobe Acrobat Reader software loaded onto your computer and you'll have the ability to create a very credible scale replica made of paper. Just pay your US $2 (or $5 for all three-color versions) and get busy. Place your order at visualspicer.com.

Rack up the rubber

The tidier alternative to leaving your extra set of tires and/or wheels piled up in the garage is to store them overhead and out of the way using the Michelin Heavy Duty Tire Rack from Hyloft/Diamond Storage Concepts. To accommodate tire widths, this steel assembly's telescoping horizontal support bars can be adjusted 34 to 60 inches (86 to 152 cm.) while supporting up to 400 pounds/181 kg. (with proper wall mounting, of course). The three telescoping bars can be relocated in the side frames to accommodate tires. Check your local auto parts supply store for the Michelin rack or order one for $160 US from hyloft.com.

Protecting plate

Whether your jurisdiction requires a front licence plate, anyone concerned about keeping their vehicle ding and scratch-free should consider installing a flexy-frame licence plate holder. The patented one-inch-thick LD model and more robust three-centimetre-thick HD version act like bumper guards since they're are made of a soft rubber compound. They are claimed to help reduce or prevent expensive bumper damage caused by a low-speed impact, regardless if you hit someone or someone hits you. The LD sells for $20 US and the HD is priced at $35. Pick one up at flexyframe.com.

Driving Force. Knowing how your ABS works can save you in an emergency

drive@metronews.ca

Anti-lock braking system, or ABS, are among the most effective safety features on your car. But it's important to know how they work, so you can make the most of them when they're needed.

"The main purpose for ABS is to make sure the driver is capable of steering the vehicle in an emergency braking situation," says Sylvain Gilbert, manager of technical services for Mercedes-Benz Canada. "If you have your foot on the brakes hard and the front wheels lock, you can do whatever you want and the car won't turn. ABS keeps the brakes from locking."

Brakes use heavy metal rotors (also called discs) that are located behind the wheels and turn with them. When you press the brake pedal, metallic pads squeeze against the rotors, and the resulting friction stops the car. ABS doesn't activate during regular braking, because the tires grip the pavement and you stay in control.

But on a slippery surface, the car can slide like a toboggan. In the past, when cars didn't have ABS, drivers were trained to "pump" the brakes. This let the tires turn slightly, which gave them a chance to reestablish their grip before the driver braked again.

ABS does the same thing, but much faster than you possibly could — as much as several times a second. You don't necessarily stop any faster, and in some cases it may even take a bit longer to stop, but you'll be able to steer your vehicle. That could mean the difference between going around an object or hitting it, or getting around a corner instead of sliding into the intersection.

The sensors, computers and solenoids that ABS uses are also the basis of several other safety systems, including electronic stability control, which brakes specific wheels if your car is sliding sideways, and hill hold, which keeps them on for a few seconds so you don't roll back on an incline while going from brake to throttle.

Brake pedals used to vibrate harshly when ABS came on, but new systems are far quieter. "The system is under pressure and the pedal would vibrate because the solenoid was opening and closing and pumping that pressure," Gilbert says. You may feel the brake pedal sink slightly, but don't take your foot off it. Instead, press firmly and let the ABS do its job.

More on ABS

- ABS and electronic stability control are mandatory on all new cars sold in Canada, starting with the 2012 model year.
- The first all-electronic, four-wheel, multi-channel ABS system, the basic type used today, was invented by Bosch and first offered as an option on the 1978 Mercedes-Benz S-Class, and shortly afterwards, on the BMW 7 Series.
- ABS can only do so much. Any time the road is slippery, slow down, and start breaking sooner.
